LABOR SHORTAGE

IN THE EAST

Not for many years has the labor situation in the Lake Superior copper district been as acute as it is at present.
During the last few years the low price of copper led to the curtailment of many mining and exploring operations, with the result that men were thrown out of employment and forced to seek other fields. They left the country and probably some of them found work on the iron ranges in Michigan and Minnesota. Now that copper has advanced in price and the companies have found it desirable to increase the scale of operations, they are confronted with the difficulty of securing the quantity and quality of labor that they wish. Iron-mining operations are demanding all the labor that can be found and copper mining elsewhere is equally in need. This situation is causing some embarrassment to several of the companies which would like to increase their production and is comparatively new to the district, where labor has always been plentiful and fairly cheap.—Engineering and Mining Journal.
